Disinherited.

Matthew Clarendon was dead. There had been a little shock of surprise in the community when the news first got abroad, for Mr. Clarendon was widely known, and his death was quite sudden. Three days before, he had been at his place of business, as shrewd and eager and grasping as ever, and now he was dead. All that he had toiled and scraped together—all that had given him power and position, fell away now, and left him naked and a beggar on the threshold of eternity; for Matthew Clarendon's "treasures" were laid up in bonds and stocks upon the earth, and were utterly valueless where he had gone. Instead of saying, "What will the men do without him?" men asked, "What was he probably worth?"

There was a good deal of speculation besides, as to what would become of Mr. Clarendon's money. Indeed, "money" seemed to be the prevailing thought in men's minds whenever they mentioned him, as it had been his own at all times these many years. There seemed so little of him, in fact, apart from his money, that one had a sort of Hobson's choice regarding it.

Somewhere in the wide world Matthew Clarendon had a son. They had quarreled and parted six years before, and though Robert Clarendon had been in town half a score of times since, they had never once met, or looked in each other's faces in all those years, and now the opportunity for reconciliation was past. The housekeeper knowing the state of affairs between Mr. Clarendon and his son, was in doubt what to do about notifying the latter concerning his father's death. She was not quite certain where to find him, either and so concluded to telegraph at once to Clarendon's brother, Mr. Anthony Clarendon, who was a small farmer in Pennsylvania.

Two days after, when Mr. Anthony Clarendon, travel-soiled and sad-heartened, reached the residence of his late brother, he was informed by the housekeeper, in a nervous half whisper, that "he" was in there, nodding her head toward an inner door.

"Yes, I will go in presently," he replied supposing she meant his brother.

"He's that cut up—I never would have believed it if I hadn't seen him," she continued.

"Cut up! Good heaven's! you don't mean to tell me that poor Matthew came to his death by violence?" he cried, a look of horror overspreading his face.

"I mean Mr Robert sir."

"What! poor Rob dead too?" he interrupted, in a sort of helpless amazement.

"Oh, no, sir; no indeed!" she said hastily. "He's come back home, that's all.—But you don't know how he takes on."

At that moment the door of the room designated by Mrs. Darnley opened, and a young man came out. His clothing was worn, his hat drawn low over his forehead, and his face downcast.

"Mr. Robert," said the housekeeper, eagerly speaking in the tone with which one coaxes a crying child, "here's your uncle from Pennsylvania."

The young man came forward and extended his hand in a sort of shamed, hesitating way.

"My dear boy!" And the tremulous hand was caught and held in a firm, close pressure. "I am so glad you are here, dear Robert." Mr. Clarendon said this with a heartiness there was no mistaking.

"Oh, uncle Anthony—he—he's dead!" he gasped, in a sort of hollow whisper, "and he died hating me—hating his own son! Oh, why did I not come before it was too late!"

Anthony Clarendon put his arm over the young man's shoulder, as if he was a child, instead of a young man of twenty six.

"He doesn't hate you now, Rob: not if he knows, as I think he does, how you feel," he said, gently. "Perhaps he sees, too how differently he might have done, and knows the mistakes he made, and is sorry for them; we don't know."

"It was I who was the most to blame—I was so impatient of control. I never, alas! have controlled myself," he said, with a shiver.

"Well, we will let the dead bury its dead," Mr. Clarendon said, cheerfully. "I don't believe much in crying for spilled milk; it never fills the pail again. If a man runs upon some ugly reef and is capsized, that is no reason why he should never sail out of it. There's a broad sea before you, my boy; only mind the rudder well, and you'll come into a pleasant harbor yet. And now I must go and see poor Mat."

With all his natural hopefulness and cheerfulness of spirit Anthony Clarendon could not quite fight off the feeling of depression which weighed upon him when he looked on the still face of his brother. It was something like three years since he had seen Matthew, and oh, how old and thin and hard the face had grown! He was near four years his junior, and, standing there, his mind ran back to their boyhood—to Mat's boyhood—and he tried to realize that this hard, sternlaced man had ever been the ruddy, handsome, joyous little Mat whom he remembered so well, and of whom he had been so proud.

"Poor Mat!" he said, brokenly; "poor boy! It wasn't a pleasant way you chose, though it was paved with gold."

And if there had ever been the faintest feeling of envy in his heart at the "success" of his brother, it died then and there.

What ever others might have thought, it never once occurred to Anthony Clarendon that Matthew would disinherit his child. He was surprised to hear it hinted that there was a will, but concluded, upon reflection, that Matthew had wished to make some small legacies, and, possibly, knowing Robert's habits, had left the property in trust for him. But he was by no means prepared for the revelation which the will made, when, the day following the funeral, it was made public.

First, there was a gift of two hundred dollars to his "beloved brother, Anthony Clarendon." The rest of his fortune was to go to the daughter of his friend, Miss Lettie Ashby. But upon these conditions: Miss Ashby was not to marry his son, Robert Dudley Clarendon, nor to see him, nor to hold any communication with him whatsoever. She had only a life interest in the property, and could not therefore convey it to any other person. In case of her decease, or her disobedience of the terms mentioned in the will, the entire property was to revert to Harvard College.

Robert listened to the reading of the will with a face from which every particle of color had vanished. It was not so much disappointment, for he had thought very little of the property since he had heard of his father's death. It was not the command placed upon Lettie Ashby, for, alas! had he not long since forfeited all claim to her regard or respect? But the cruel care which his

NEWPORT DAILY NEWS.

SATURDAY, April 20, 1872.

In the State House of Representatives, yesterday, the new militia bill was defeated and the Commissioners on revision directed to report the present militia law. The same body voted to adhere to their late vote on the fishery question. Consequently we as yet have no law on that subject, the two bodies being unable to agree. The differences in regard to the Ohio law were settled by a Committee of Conference. There is another week's session before the Assembly.

In the United States Senate yesterday the postal appropriation bill was reported with amendments doubling the subsidies and service of the Pacific mail and the New York and Rio Janeiro steamship lines. The bill supplementary to the act to incorporate the Texas Pacific Railroad was debated. In the House the civil service reform bill was recommitted by a vote of 96 to 79, after an exciting discussion between Mr. Butler of Massachusetts and Mr. Garfield of Ohio. Both branches adjourned until Monday.

Boston builders seem to find no little trouble in rearing that gigantic structure known as the Coliseum. Thursday an attempt was made to raise the first of the wooden trusses which are to support its roof. But after it got clear of the ground, except at the ends, it was found that the bases of the arch had spread about four feet when the weight of the structure began to rest upon them, and the energies of the contractors have since been turned to drawing them together. After working an hour and lessening the spread about eighteen inches, the hawser broke with a sharp snap, and the immense truss spread again worse than before. At night the feet of the immense arch were still slightly spread, and it had been raised only a third way to its perpendicular place, being suspended at an angle of about thirty degrees.

The Post Office.

The dissatisfaction with the present plan of operations upon the Post office building, in this city, seems to be wide spread. The building of itself is a poor concern, by no means appropriate for a city of our size and wealth, and the improvements now contemplated will leave the general appearance of the structure an hundred per cent. worse than it is at present. The obstruction of any portion of that wide sidewalk, the only respectable walk on Thames street, is especially displeasing to many of our older and most influential citizens, who deem that there is room enough in the rear for all the changes and enlargements there is need of making. Again, this front addition is to be but one story high, which will break the symmetry and greatly mar the appearance of the respectable looking front which the building now presents. There are others who consider that that we should be satisfied with nothing short of a new Post Office. Government has been lavish with its means in other cities, and erected structures which are an ornament to the places and a benefit to the country. Why should not the same thing be done for us? With a population of 13,000 and a real estate valuation of about $20,000,000, we are compelled to put up with a Post Office and Custom House combined, worth less than ten thousand dollars. Congress has just appropriated two and a half millions for the new Post Office in Chicago, which will probably cost five millions. A new office has lately been completed at Portland, Maine, a city of thirty thousand inhabitants, at a cost of nearly two millions. An appropriation of two hundred thousand dollars is what Fall River is to have for her new office, and any quantity of other new Post Office buildings are being erected in various parts of the country at a large expense. What is to hinder our coming in for our share of the improvements? Now is your time, gentlemen. "Strike while the iron is hot."

Many of our citizens are in favor of calling a meeting and having the matter thoroughly discussed in public. We agree with such an arrangement. It is a matter that concerns the people, and there is no better way for the people to give it a proper consideration than in a public meeting. One thing is certain, if we cannot obtain a new Post Office we can secure a change in the present plan of improvements so that they shall be more in accordance with the wishes of the public. By what we have said we cast no aspersions upon our efficient and energetic Postmaster. We believe that he has labored to the best of his ability for improvements of some kind, but the agents of the government who have the affair in charge are the ones responsible for the shape in which these improvements are to be made.

Spice.

A drunken Scotchman, returning from a fair, fell asleep by the roadside, when a pig found him, and began licking his mouth. Sawney roared: "Wha's kissing me noo? Ye see what it is to be weel liked amang the lasses."

A country clergyman, paying a professional visit to a dying neighbor, who was a very churlish and universally unpopular man, put the usual questions: "Are you willing to go, my friend?" "Oh, yes," said the sick man, "I am." "Well," said the simple-minded minister, "I am glad you are; for the neighbors are willing."

Corpulent old lady: "I should like a ticket for the train." Booking clerk (who thinks he will make a joke): "Yes'm; will you go in the passenger train or cattle train?" Lady: 'Well, if you are a specimen of what I shall experience in the passenger train give me a ticket for the cattle train, by all means."

"Madam," said a husband to his young wife in a little altercation which will spring up in the best regulated families, "when a man and his wife have quarrelled and each considers the other at fault, which of the two ought to advance toward reconciliation?" "The best natured and wiser of the two", said the wife, putting up her mouth for a kiss, which was given with unction.

A sheet iron cat in Cleveland, whose inwards are clock-work, is placed upon a shed-roof each night, its calls bringing to its treacherous arms the feline denizens of a whole ward. Once within her treacherous embrace, there is nothing but a moraine of pulled hair, claws and fiddle-strings left to tell the tail.

Such is Life.

Life is a sea—like ships we meet—
We speak each other, and are gone,
Across that deep O what a fleet
Of human souls is hurrying on!

We meet—we part—and hope some day
To meet again on sea or shore,
Before we reach that peaceful bay,
Where all shall meet, to part no more.

O great commander of the fleet!
O Ruler of the tossing seas!
Thy signal to our eyes how sweet!
How sweet thy breath—the Heavenly breeze!

A Few More Thoughts on the Mayor Question.

Editors of News:

I must take issue with you regarding the Mayoralty. To ignore the party largely dominant in this city, after a lease of four years to a Democrat, is a logic I cannot comprehend. What citizen of prominence is not recognized by his fellows, or of one or the other, political organizations? With a Democrat of W. P. Congdon's high reputation, why did he not under leadership of a zealous defender of the faith, secure more than ten votes? Only that the Democracy were a solid column for the present incumbents, and by persuasive eloquence, whinings and cajolings, gathered in Republicans to aid in extending an administration unworthy the confidence of this people. Who will control the proposed citizens meeting? Will Republicans enter upon a canvass in a caucus with Democrats, and others, hostile to a change in the Mayoralty? The result of such a gathering is inevitable. Why do not the City Republican Committee appointed for the very contingency before us, call its organization together, carefully discuss the issue before the people, nominate a citizen who can reflect honor upon the Mayoralty, and from its own ranks place a candidate before the electors, one alive to the interests of our city, ready to advance ideas, and never faltering when responsibility is before him. Such a man Mayor Atkinson is not. It has required some pluck to stand before the people with defeat almost inevitable, during the four years past, yet the Republican nominee last year, warned and threatened, met the shafts of pretended friends and bitter foes, never daunted, only that the people might, if disposed, rally upon some citizen to succeed the present Mayor. He has assured his friends, that his most cordial support shall be given the nominee of a Republican Caucus. Idle is it to ignore the two parties of our Country, they have, must, will and should exist. Safety lies therein, and it is a recognised principle of Government conceded by the most eminent conservatives of this generation. X.

A New Man Nominated.

Mr. Editor:

As communications on city politics, seem to be the order of the day, it occured to your correspondent that it would be well to add a word in favor of, or against, somebody. But as it is useless to attempt to find anything favorable to say about either of the candidates now mentioned, we propose to break out in a new place. We do not want for the year to come, an ornamental mayor, we do not want an expensive mayor, or a fishy mayor, but a man who is willing to attend to all the duties of the city. We want some return for what is paid him, and we want to pay a mayor for what he does. Now, Mr. Editor, allow me to suggest the name of a person who has served the city in former years with ability and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. Hon. Wm. J. Swinburne is that man, and if elected will no doubt serve to the entire satisfaction of his present constituents. SNOBBS.

P. S. If we cannot find at our next election a candidate who can be elected, let us go into woman suffrage, and place, one of our strong minded women, in that position. S.

Another Suggestion.

NEWPORT, April 20, 1872.

Mr. Editor:

Your suggestion to call a caucus on Monday evening to nominate a Mayor was a good one. Old political parties are now so amalgamated that one can hardly tell to which particular wing he belongs, and as politics are of less consideration than the wellfare and prosperity of our city, I respectfully propose that a caucus be called, without distinction of party, and every one nominate and vote for the candidate he prefers and agree that he who gets the plurality of votes be unanimously declared the nominee. We hope the fortunate man may be the one whose public acts are well known to have always been for the advancement of our city to prosperity and wealth, and in the education of the rising generation which makes every citizen's property more valuable.

The Pardon of Sutton.

Mr. Editor:

The question on the pardon of Loyd S. Sutton comes before the Senate next Tuesday. Now if the Senate pardons him, of what possible use is, or will be the trial by jury hereafter? If outside parties can influence the Senate to override the law of trial by juries all courts for criminal cases may as well be dispensed with. They can be of no use and must become a mere farce in their operations as far as Justice is concerned. Let every Senator reflect well before he gives his vote on this important question.

JUSTICE.

What a Woman Has Done.

Jane Bell, a single, unaided woman, who, visiting the North Carolina Coast in 1863, became convinced that there was as much missionary work to do at home as among the foreign heathen, and setting herself down to a life's work among the poor whites of the islands, resolved to teach them not only to read, but, more desperate task—to work. She established a free school at Beaufort, and another on Harker's Island off the coast, to which is attached a farm.—Having been blessed with a strong body as well as will, she has not only taught, but cooked, planted, plowed, sowed and reaped with her own hands, until the wilderness has blossomed, if not into roses, into figs and vegetables, to the amazement of the natives, who for generations have been quite willing to starve if clamming and fishing were not practicable. In the nine years of her steady labor in this place she is reported to have wrought a singular change in the habits and condition of the Islanders;—they have not only received a measurable degree of education, but have learned to wish for work, to accomplish it with skill and patience, and to dress, habits religion and the minor morals and manners, have risen in the scale of civilization.

ABOUT HOME.

—Much complaint is made in regard to bad roads in Little Compton and Tiverton.

—This is said to have been the coldest spring known since eighteen hundred and —— we have forgotten when.

—Harper's Weekly, Every Saturday, and Hearth and Home are received. Clarke has them.

—Such weather as this rejoices the hearts of our farmers as well as those of everybody in general.

—Obediah Chace, an approved minister of the Society of Friends, proposes to be at Friends Meeting on Marlborough street tomorrow morning at 10 1-2 o'clock.

—Our townsman, J. A. Williams, the Original, has on hand a large supply of beautiful stereoscopic views of Newport and vicinity. Give him a call.

—The funeral of the late Rev. Geo. B. Ide D. D., whose death we noticed a few days, since will take place in Springfield Mass., on Monday next at 2 P. M. He will be buried in Philadelphia.

—The Western Union Telegraph Co., are going to put a branch office on the Parade for the accomodation of the people in that part of the city. This is a proper move and will meet with the favor of a large class of our citizens.

—The ordinance of baptism will be administered tomorrow afternoon, immediately at the close of the services, by the Rev. Mr Wheeler, pastor of the Central Baptist Church. Notice of the place of baptism will be given at the church tomorrow.

ZION CHURCH.—Morning service will be held at 10 1-2 o'clock. The sermon will be from the text, "Behold, He taketh away, who can hinder Him."—Job 9: 12. Instead of the usual afternoon service, there will be an evening service, commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. S. C. Hill, of Emmanuel church. All are invited to attend.

THEATRE.—"Divorce," that great play which drew such a crowded house here, some weeks since, is to be repeated next Wednesday evening. No play has been performed in this country for years which has met with the favor and popularity this production has received. A first class troupe is that under the direction of Furbish & Wilton, and we predict for this second performance a success equal to the first.

The Death of James R. Knowles.

At a special meeting of the Wardens and Vestrymen of Zion Church, on Friday evening, April 19th, 1872, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously passed:

WHEREAS, This Vestry has learned, with the most sincere regret, of the death, after a brief illness, of Mr. JAMES R. KNOWLES, who for four years past has been one of its most active, useful and exemplary members. Therefore

Resolved, That in this great loss we recognize the mysterious hand of Divine Providence, and bow with humble submission to the unalterable decree of the Almighty,—and while we lament the decease of one so much respected and beloved in our vestry, in our parish, and community, our hearts instinctively throb with the deepest sympathy for his bereaved and afflicted family, to whom his loss is truly irreparable.

Resolved, That, as evidence of our high appreciation of the inestimable qualities of our late friend and associate, we will attend his funeral, in a body, on Saturday next,—and that these Resolutions be entered on the Record, a copy of the same transmitted to the family of the deceased by the Vestry Clerk, and published in the papers of the city.

Attest: JAMES ATKINSON,
Vestry Clerk.

The Vineyard.

Two sub-contractors on the Vineyard Sound railroad, named Gomley and Wiley, suddenly left last week, after receiving their pay, without settling their own bills, owing several hundred dollars. Mr. Swift, a grocer of Falmouth, to whom they owed $400, "went for them," and overtook them at Middleborough, when they settled their little indebtedness with him. The contractors were on their way to Connecticut.

Gen. George Thom, U.S. Engineer, visited Edgartown, Wednesday, and with a party visited the locality on the South Beach, where the opening to the ocean is intended to be made. Gen. Thom will report to the authorities at Washington in regard to the importance of the opening, cost, &c.

New York Items.

Collector Arthur has issued an order allowing steamship companies to receive general order goods in their own ware-houses.

Henry Ward Beecher, by invitation, speaks on the Sunday-library question before the Cooper Union next Monday evening.

Judge Brady, Thursday, heard counter-motions in stocks dispute between Jay Gould and Gorden, the alleged Earl of Aberdeen.

The second trial in the case of Gelucke and others against Quentell, before Judge Barrett, resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for the sum of $61,000. The first action, brought several years ago, was for the recovery of $33,410.

A drunken quarrel in a bar room at the corner of Sixtieth street and Second avenue ended in murder on Wednesday night. David Murphy a carman, was the culprit, David Barry the victim. Murphy surrendered himself, and pleads "self defence."

All the papers seem pretty well satisfied with the city charter as passed Thursday except the World, which calls it a preposterous instrument. Under its provisions the election of city officers will occur on the third Tuesday of May. An opinion is widely expressed that Governor Hoffman will not sign it.

A singular case was decided Thursday in the Court of General Sessions. Hubbel, a lawyer, brought a suit against one Finch on a charge of attempting to rob him. The testimony of witnesses for the defence went to show the good character of the accused, but it was asserted that Hubbel was addicted to lying when excited. The jury found the defendant.

Secretary Fish has been exceedingly fortunate, not in avoiding disputes with men with whom he has been brought into official contact, but in winning victories over those with whom he has quarrelled. The most throughly defeated of his opponents is the late Russian Minister, Catacazy, who is dismissed from office in disgrace. The Secretary has the more reason for flattering himself over this victory, from the fact that the Russian Prime Minister was inclined to favor Catacazy, to whom he was warmly attached and at one time was loftily indignant because he was sent home in disgrace.

father had taken to disinherit him stung him to the quick. He had come home covered with remorse and sorrow, and ready to take upon himself all the blame for the estrangement which had come between them. His own dissipation and follies were excuse enough, he said, for his father's hardness. The latent love in his heart blossomed softly over the past, shutting it tenderly from sight. With characteristic generosity, he talked as extravagantly of his charity as he ever had of his money.

But this cold calculating, unforgiving spirit, reaching back, as it were, from the grave, drove back with a sudden shock the great host of good resolves and penitent sorrows which were struggling into birth, and the heart, softened plastic to good influences, was again thrown back upon itself, bitterer, more reckless, and dissolute than ever.

"It was a cruel thing for Matthew to do—God forgive him!" Anthony Clarendon said, gravely. "I don't want any of his money, Heaven knows, but he had no right to so utterly and entirely cast off his own flesh and blood, the child of the pretty young wife who gave her life with the gift of this son. It is a bitter, bitter shame!"

"Don't be troubled on my account, Uncle Anthony," Robert said, lightly; "you know the rogue's motto, 'The world owes one a living,' and it does not matter much to me, now, how I get it. I have got along without him living, and doubtless I can dead. Dead! Uncle Anthony, do you know he has been dead these dozen years—dead to all intents and purposes, save money getting?"

"Don't Rob, don't," Mr. Clarendon said, quickly; "he was my brother and your father."

"Father! What sort of a father has he ever been to me?" he asked, scornfully. "I don't mean in money matters. God knows that was not what I thought of when I came home on hearing he was sick. I've never lacked for money, but I have lacked for love, and sympathy, and forbearance all my life. I am a miserable fellow, I grant. I don't believe anybody else realizes it half as keenly as I do, sometimes; but Heaven knows I have tried to do well more than once, but I hadn't strength to go quite alone, and he never would help me—nor nobody else. Well, it's the way of the world, I'm not going to mope about it—nobody cares for me and I'll care for nobody."

"Robert, I care for you, and though I am not a rich man, I have got a happy, comfortable little home down there in Clearfield, to which you are as welcome as my own boys and girls," Mr. Clarendon said, earnestly.

Robert stood looking out of the window, and did not speak nor look round. After a little pause his uncle said, hesitatingly:

"I don't understand about this Miss Lettie Ashby, Robert."

The young man started abruptly, and turned round, a vivid flush overspreading his face.

"Don't ask me to talk about her, Uncle Anthony," he said, hastily.

"But you will tell me who she is, and something how it happens that she becomes your father's legatee?" he asked quietly.

"She is the daughter of the late Silas Ashby, for many years the business partner of my father. They are in rather reduced circumstances—she and her mother—and some people were unkind enough to say Mr. Ashby suffered losses through his partner, why he left his family so destitute. Of course, you and I don't believe such a malignant assertion!" he said, with a satirical smile that pained Anthony Clarendon more than even the story he hinted at.

Robert had turned round, now, and stood with his back to the light. The flush had died out of his face, leaving it pale and haggard. There was a hard, bitter expression in the fair, blonde face, and the deep blue eyes had a cold, glittering look in them.

"You see," he went on with the same satirical smile, "it is a case of conscience—admitting people's suspicions to be correct."

"Robert, there is something back of all this," his uncle said gently; "tell me, my boy."

"No, there isn't, at least, not now. There was little enough to need that he should add these humiliating restrictions—for her to see—for Lettie Ashby scorns me almost as much as I do myself—not quite! She is as high above me as the stars, and as pure and cold. What does this stainless creature know of the temptations that lie in wait for me at every turn, that dog my steps, and drag me down against the weak protest of my own will? She was never tempted in her life—how should she understand or pity me! Well, I don't ask any one's help or pity now."

"Robert—"

"I know, Uncle Anthony, but it is too late," he interrupted. "I thank you all the same, though," his voice softening a little, and catching up his hat, he went hastily out.

Mr. Clarendon went out and hunted up the housekeeper. He meant to get at the bottom of this business, now. Mrs. Darnley was a little reticent at first, but after she found how much he knew about it, she grew more communicative.

"You see, Mr. Robert and his father never got along together," she said. "I never saw two people so unlike in all my life. Your brother, sir—I beg your pardon—was a dreadfully obstinate man. He wasn't a man one could get round by tears, and that sort of thing, and he never would forgive or forget a weakness. Mr. Robert was full of life and spirits, and his father curbed him at every turn, and held a tight rein, I can tell you. But bye and bye the boy broke away, and—you've seen it sir, yourself, I dare say—just run wild. Boys are like new wine; it doesn't do to confine them two closely—nor if you expect to keep them successfully. Well, there were high words, and the reins were held tighter than ever, but when the boy—and Robert was always a warm-hearted, impulsive lad—repented and begged his father's forgiveness, he was taunted with his folly until his hot temper took fire, and he would do the same thing again.

"Things went on in this way till he was twenty, and it did seem as if those two actually took pleasure in doing what would most offend and anger the other. Mr. Robert, was lavishly generous—extravagant, I suppose, and your brother, sir, grew closer and closer every year; and this was always a bone of contention. Bye and bye another arose. For Robert fell in love with Lettie Ashby—the one mentioned in the will—and for some reason his father objected more bitter to this than to any of his previous follies, if this could be called a folly. I think Mr. Mathew had determined to bring the boy up to fill his place, and had determined just what sort of a boy, and just what sort of a man he should be, before he was out of long dresses. But, bless you! Mr. Robert was never meant for a merchant; he would have given away everything in the store, if only poor people enough came and asked him, saying they were in want.

The young man had made up his mind to civil engineering, and told his father so, one day. He didn't take the best method, perhaps, of breaking it to him, but I do think Mr. Matthew was hard with him. He turned him out of doors as one would a dog, and he did it so calmly and unfeelingly that it really seemed as if he was glad of a pretext to be rid of him. If he'd shown any heat, I should have hoped for a reconciliation some day, but he did it so quietly and coldly, as if the lad was an utter stranger, and I, for one, am not at all surprised at the will."

"But why, if he objected to Miss Ashby, did he give his entire fortune to her?" Mr. Clarendon asked.

"For two reasons; to make more bitter the thrust at Robert through the terms of the will, and to effectually prevent his ever marrying her, for he is too proud to marry her under the circumstances, even if they were friends now, and I have heard they are not. I don't know how it was, but I suppose she didn't like the way he went on. There's no denying but he has been pretty wild, and there's always enough to make things look full as bad as they are.—You see Mr. Robert was so easily persuaded, and was naturally fond of company and a jolly time, and had nobody to advise him, that is in the right way, and I don't think it very strange, myself, if he has gone to the bad."

"Nor I, either!" was the emphatic answer, and Mr. Anthony Clarendon went out, fully resolved to take his nephew home with him, and to help and encourage, and bear with him even more tenderly than he ever had with George and Harry, his own boys, and that was saying a good deal.

But Mr. Clarendon's good intentions were destined to miscarry. Robert was not to be found that day, nor the next, and Mr. Clarendon had to go home without seeing him again. He left very urgent and cordial messages for him, however, begging him to come to Clearfield immediately.—But Robert was 200 miles away from the city, and didn't get them, of course.

It would be very strange if a person of Robert Clarendon's temperament grew very much better from this sort of discipline.—I wish I could say he grew no worse, but I cannot do even that. And so, out of pity, I will drop the veil of silence over the next six months.

At the end of the time above mentioned, Mr. Anthony Clarendon received a note from Mrs. Darnley, informing him that Robert had been seen in Cleveland a week before.

"And he looked ten years older than he did when he left New York, they said," she wrote; and though it was a cramped and ungraceful epistle, without comma, or period, or capital from beginning to end, Anthony Clarendon would not have taken a hundred dollars for it; and Anthony Clarendon's wife, and his two girls, Molly and Emily, cried over it, like the foolish little women they were.

Three days afterward, Robert Clarendon sat in a narrow dingy little chamber, his face buried in his hands, when there came a low rap on the door, which seemed to open simultaneously with the rap, and revealed the fresh, kindly face of Uncle Clarendon.—The young man sprang to his feet and a crimson flush dyed his face.

"O Uncle Anthony! why—why did you come here?" he stammered in painful confusion.

"Why? To see you my dear boy, of course," was the hearty answer followed by a cordial grasp of the hand which spoke volumes. "You thought I shouldn't find you, eh, Bob?"

"I hoped you wouldn't, Uncle Anthony," the young man returned, flushing again. You are the only friend I've got, and I've pride enough left to desire to stand as well as possible with you."

"My dear boy, well or ill, I trust I am your friend all the same," was the quick reply.

"But I am not deserving of this kindness. I—I am a disgrace to you," he cried, his eyes falling.

"Nonsense! You are nothing of the kind. Don't let me hear such stuff as that, because I won't believe it."

"But, Uncle Anthony, you shall not be deceived," Robert said firmly. "I am a worthless fellow. I spent last night at the gaming table, and just look at me! I'm sorry you have seen me in these depths."

"Well, I am not," Mr. Clarendon interrupted, "because I am going to take you home with me—do you hear? and I, with mother and the girls' help am going to nurse you up, and set you on your feet again."

"O Uncle Anthony—don't!" and trembling like a child, he sank down on the edge of the bed. "I can bear hard rubs—I've had them all my life—but I—I am not used to this!"

"You aren't? Well, young man, the sooner you get used to it the better," was the dreadful severe reply, which ended in a fit of coughing, followed by a little moment of silence.

"I cannot go there, uncle, don't ask me," the young man said, looking up. "I'm not worth saving. Let me go. You don't know how far, or how many times I have transgressed, or you wouldn't say you could help me—could forgive me."

"Robert, though it be seventy times seven I should not dare cast you off." Mr. Clarendon said, gravely. "You know what He commanded; it was not alone the seven times, you remember. But do not think I do this from any feeling of duty—though I have that, but assure you, Robert, that you will make us all happier by coming to live with us. Why," he continued, more lightly. "Molly and Emily are dying for some one to pet and fuss over, now the boys have married and gone away from home. I left them planning where the lounge should be drawn that you were to occupy, you see we heard you weren't very well.

In answer to this very long speech, his companion buried his face in his hands, and fierce, convulsive sobs shook his frame till Anthony Clarendon grew alarmed, for there is something fearful in the passionate weeping of a man, as unlike a woman's tears as the fierce tornado is unlike the gentle summer rain.

"Come Rob, don't" he said, putting his arm over his shoulders, carressingly. "You will make yourself ill, so I can't get you down to Clearfield, and I was expressly forbidden to show my head there without you—just think of it, old fellow! just think what a fix your old uncle is in, and have a little feeling for him."

Robert Clarendon lifted his face, and putting both arms about his uncle's neck, laid his head on his shoulder like a weary child.

"God helping me, uncle, I will be worthy of your love and confidence, yet," he said, solemnly.

"You're worthy of it now, my boy, and so we'll dismiss that subject. Bless me! won't the girls—(and mother, too, she's all ready to love you, so don't go to hatching up any nonsense about that)—be delighted at having such a nice looking young fellow to coddle, and make jellies and toast for. I tell you, a woman is never so completely in her element as when she has some great strapping fellow to pet and wait on."

"I never had much chance to know about it, you know," Robert said, with a faint smile, and O! such a dizzy, dizzy feeling in his head.

The soft April sunshine breaking through fleecy mists of translucent amber, came with a sudden flood of golden glory into the long, low-ceiled chamber, where, but vaguely and dreamly conscious, lay young Robert Clarendon. The glossy rings of chestnut hair fell over a forehead as white and fair as a girl's, and through the transparent skin, the blue veins at the temple were almost plainly visible.

A faint, ferny odor came up over the marshy meadows from a neighboring wood, and crept slyly in at an open window at the end of the long room.

A little vase of golden crocuses, which seemed to have caught and prisoned the sunbeams, sat on the table by the bedside, and a pretty, quiet-faced young woman flitted about the room with such noiseless steps, that, watching her through his half-closed eyes, young Clarendon had a vague impression that she was an angel, and that, through some chance, he had got into heaven. There was such a delicious sense of rest and peace pervading everything, that it must be very far from the world which he dimly remembered, as one remembers a painful dream. It seemed an effort to speak, that he lay silent till his growing wonder and curiosity overcame his languid will, and then he asked, hesitatingly, "Where am I—what place is this?"

The quiet face brightened into a glad surprised smile, as it bent over him and looked in his eyes.

"Thank God, you are better, dear Robert," she said, softly.

"Are—are you flesh and blood?" he asked, wonderingly, touching her hand in a timid way.

A low, soft laugh rippled through the room, a laugh that seemed made up of the brightness of the sunshine and the sweetness of the Spring airs.

"Dear Robert! I am only Mollie—your cousin Mollie, you know—and a very common piece of clay, I assure you. Don't you remember coming home with father—your uncle Anthony—and of being so ill you could not sit up in the cars, but lay in his arms all the way?" she asked eagerly.

He shook his head in a puzzled way.

"That was ages and ages ago," he said dreamily.

It was just three weeks ago. You see you have been very sick, and it has seemed a good while, because you have suffered so much," she replied quietly. "Now you have nothing else to do but get well and strong again, and that reminds me that I mustn't let you talk," and she laid her hands playfully over his lips. "I am your nurse, you see, and you must mind every word I say."

He smiled faintly, took the little hand between his white, thin palms, and fell asleep like a tired child. After which, Mollie slipped noiselessly out to tell the joyful tidings to the anxious household below.

After this, Robert gained steadily, though slowly, and it was well into May before he was able to be got down stairs, and then his uncle brought him down in his arms, and put him on the lounge. As he lay back on the pillow, he closed his eyes to keep back the tears that would come, in spite of his manhood.

"If I had had a home like this, always!" he whispered, trying to control the tremulousness in his voice.

"Well, you are to have this, always, and that is just as well, and may be better, who knows?" was the cherry answer; "that is, till you make one for yourself, you are to have this," he added.

"I shall never do that, Uncle Anthony," Robert replied, a faint red suffusing his pale cheek; "he made that impossible."

"He did, did he? Don't you be too sure!" And Anthony Clarendon shot out of the room like a rocket, and Mollie ran after him in a mysterious way which startled Robert so that he sat upright and stared after them.

And while he looked the door opened, and a pale, sweet face appeared. Robert thought for one brief instant that the old delirium had returned—the delirium in which this face had been always in some way, about him.

And while he gazed, spell-bound and half-dazed, the beautiful face flushed and the soft dark eyes swam in tears, and the sweetest voice in all the world cried, "O, Robert!" in a quick, joyful way, that brought Robert Clarendon to his feet, and half way across the room. Then the fictitious strength deserted him and he sank into a chair, white and panting for breath.

"Dear Robert, I have come to ask your forgiveness for deserting you when you most needed me—can you ever trust me again, and love me, Robert?" she cried eagerly, as blushing, she knelt by his chair, and laid her lips against his thin hand.

"Lettie, go back!" he gasped faintly; "you wasn't to see me, nor hold any communication with me, or—"

"Hush Robert!" she interrupted gently.

"I couldn't take a crown on such terms as those. The college is welcome to your father's fortune, so far as I am concerned."

"Lettie! You have not given it up?" he asked, breathlessly, an eager joy flaming in his face, and thrilling in his voice.

"I have given it up, Robert," she replied, softly. "Why does it seem a hard or strange thing to you, that I should do so? It is a thousand times easier than the alternative, Robert. I tried, but I could not do that."

Twice Molly Clarendon opened the door to come, and twice she went back to the kitchen with a report "that those two pupils were making perfect fools of themthemselves." But "Those two people" didn't hear her, and might have disagreed with her if they had. It makes all the difference in the world the point of view from which one looks at a thing

I am not going to declare that Robert Clarendon became perfect from that hour. He had many weaknesses and temptations to overcome, and I dare say he swerved a little sometimes from the straight path. But he struggled bravely, always encouraged and comforted by his uncle's broad charity and Christian patience, and the tender, motherly heart of his uncle's wife. In this pleasant, loving home, his good resolves were nurtured into quick and generous growth. But not until he was sure himself did he make that new home which he was once so sure he should never make. In his secret heart he had vowed that Lettie should respect him as well as love him, when she became his wife. Besides she had given up a fortune for him, and he had resolved to make her forget it by so surrounding her with comfort and luxury that she should never miss it. And so they waited three years, and then one day, in Uncle Anthony's pleasant parlor, with the May sunshine falling through the open windows, and the song of robins in the air, Robert Clarendon and Letty Ashby were married.

Years have passed away, and today Robert Clarendon is reckoned a rich man. But above and beyond this he is a pure, upright, generous, tender-hearted man, of stainless honor and unimpeachable integrity. And yet so tender toward the weak, so patient with the erring, so ready to find good in everything, so quick to forgive and help the tempted and sinning, that some of his friends, who did not know his past experience, think he errs on the side of charity.

"I believe," said a friend to him, not long since, "that if a man deceived you or sinned against you twenty times a day, and each time came and said he was sorry, that you would trust and forgive him."

"Until seventy times seven," he responded, softly and solemnly.

Some rabid statistician figures out a yearly generation of twenty-one million dogs in this country. Of this number he estimates that about one hundred thousand go mad annually and bite ten thousand people.—From reading the western papers recently we should judge that about that number of persons were bitten every week. The above computation suggests an interesting problem in canine arithmetic:—If one hundred thousand dogs bite ten thousand people in one year, how many dogs will it take to bite forty millions of people in the same time, and give us all the hydrophobia? and how many bites we shall have apiece? Washington Notabilities.

A World letter writer describes the personal appearance of some of the Washington notabilities:

PATTERSON AND PERRY.

Here is a pair of Senators—Patterson of New Hampshire, and Perry of Michigan, Patterson is rather the taller of the two, but not so trim and symmetrical in figure as the latter. But he has a high-bred, kindly face, blue eyes, heads of whiskers in front of each ear, hair thin over the brain, and a pleasant, flexible voice. I never heard him speak in the Senate, but as a parlor talker he is most captivating. He is rich in imagery, fluent in expression, and in description invests even worn-out topics with a grace and beauty and color most charming. Halting to look at a bit of painted color in a window, is

CARPENTER, AMES AND SCHURZ.

Attending the sale of arms investigation, the other day, was Carpenter, who is a large, but not particularly tall man, has a good deal of gray in his black hair, and wears a heavy mustache. He is a powerful-looking man, but, withal, gives the impression of an indolent one from his lounging attitudes. Senator Hamlin looks like the plain Yankee farmer; he is quite gray, and not a little bald; his face indicates benevolence. He wears no beard. He speaks with great distinctness, and raises his voice as he puts a question. Senator Ames is handsome enough to be the husband of his beautiful wife A small, but well formed man, he is quick in his movements, but always dignified. He does not appear over thirty years of age, though in reality he is, I believe, three years older. His dark brown hair is combed smoothly from his forehead and his dark mustache keeps exactly to the proper curves, which is to say Senator Ames is the picture of neatness, yet he is not a vain man or a prig. It is as much his nature to be neat as it is that of some others of his colleagues to be the reverse. Senator Schurz leans far back in chair with his hand at his head, and does not change his position as he questions the witnesses. Occasionally he leans forward to write something down.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE, under the editorial management of Gail Hamilton, has more than doubled its subscription list, during the past four months. The May number contains: "Migration, Colonization, Homes," by Horace Greeley; "Miss Hannah Adams," by James Parton; "Household Discoveries," by Gail Hamilton; "Brother Anderson," by Thomas K. Beecher; "Longevity," by Dr. Dio Lewis; Reminiscences of Rev. Dr. Bethune," by A. A. Willits, D. D., etc.

Twenty-five per cent. saved

By using DOOLEY'S YEAST POWDER in the preparation of biscuits, rolls, pastry, etc., over any of the ordinary baking powders in market. This is occasioned by the full net weight in each package, and the fact that it is composed of articles strictly pure, healthy and nutritious, which insures satisfactory results every time. By using Dooley's Yeast Powder, thirty pounds more bread can be made from a barrel of flour, than by any other process of raising dough.—A trial will satisfy any one of its standard excellence. The new Colonnade Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa., has no superior in the style of its appointments.

Editorial Notices are so common that it is almost impossible for an editor to express his honest opinion of the merits of any article without being suspected of interested motives. This fact, however, shall not deter us from saying what we think of a new addition to the Materia Medica to which our attention has been recently directed. We refer to DR. J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS, a remedy which is making its way into more families just now than all the other advertised medicines put together. There seems to be no question about the potency of its tonic and alterative properties, while it possesses the great negative recommendation of containing neither alcohol nor mineral poison.—That it is a specific for Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, and many complaints of nervous origin, we have reason to know; and we are assured on good authority that as a general invigorant, regulating and purifying medicine, it has no equal. It is stated that its ingredients, (obtained from the wilds of California,) are new to the medical world; and its extraordinary effects certainly warrant the conclusion that it is a compound of agents hitherto unknown. If popularity is any criterion, there can be no doubt of the efficiency of the VINEGAR BITTERS, for the sale of the article is immense and continually increasing. ap13-4w

Diseased Digestion.

If chronic indigestion affected the stomach only it might be more easily borne; but it gives rise, inevitably, to many other diseases affecting the liver, the nerves, the bowels and the brain. Biliousness, nervous tremors, constipation, headache and terrible mental disturbances are among its usual accompaniments. In fact, every organ, every fibre of the frame sympathizes with the debilitated and diseased stomach. What is needed in such a case? Clearly an alterative and invigorant; and among medicines of that class Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is, beyond all comparison or estimate, the best. Mere purgatives only deprive the system of the little strength that disease has left it. Salivants have the same effect. The whole internal organism has gone wrong, and can only be put right and kept right by a medicine in which the tonic and stimulating elements predominate, but are qualified and modified by anti-bilious aperients and blood-purifying components. Now, the truth is (and the medical faculty as well as the public know the fact), that Hostetter's Bitters contain every ingredient requisite for the cure of dyspepsia and all the ailments of body and mind which it involves. This has been proved in so many thousands of instances that it seems almost idle to repeat the statement.

The great tonic rallies exhausted nature, from whatever cause enfeebled, and permanently recruits the vigor of the nerves, the muscles and the brain.—Its effect upon the brain is to give strength to the will and precision to the judgment, and to banish despondency and that infirmity of purpose which generally accompanies bodily weakness.

A Sad Falling Out.—It is indeed a sad falling out when, after years of the closest intimacy, the hair parts company with the head. Fortunately the lamentable separation may be easily prevented and the twain more closely united than ever by a timely and systematic use of LYON'S KATHAIRON, the most potent invigorant of the hair and promoter of its growth and beauty known to modern pharmacy. It completely obviates the dry and parched condition of the roots of the hair, which is preliminary to its coming out, by supplying the precise degree of moisture requisite to its preservation in a healthy state. It is the only true dissolvent and evaporant of dandruff and other impurities of the scalp, whose presence is injurious to the hair. As a beautifier of the head the Kathairon has no equal. It not only increases the quantity of the hair, but improves its quality immediately, imparting a lustrous appearance and silky texture which are exceedingly attractive. n&j

ASSESSOR'S OFFICE, 1ST DISTRICT OF R. ISLAND,
Custom House Building,
Providence, April 10th, 1872,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Annual Lists, Valuations, Assessments and Enumerations of property, subject to tax, under the INTERNAL REVENUE LAWS of the United States, including the Tax on INCOMES, for the year 1871, as made by the several Assistant Assessors of this District, will be open at this office for the examination of all persons interested, for five (5) days from the 20th day of April, 1872.

Appeals will be received and determined by the Assessor relative to any erroneous or excessive valuations or enumerations on said Lists, as made by the Assistant Assessors, "Provided, however, that no appeal shall be allowed to any party after he shall have been duly assessed, and the Annual List containing the assessment, has been transmitted to the Collector of the District."

"All appeals to the Assessor shall be made in writing, and shall specify the particular cause, matter or thing, respecting which a decision is requested, and shall, moreover, state the ground or principle of error complained of."

THOMAS G. TURNER,
ap10 Assessor First District of Rhode Island.

Cucumber Pumps, Fertilizers, &c.

THE subscriber would inform his patrons that he is ready at the OLD STAND on Commercial Wharf to answer their need. A competent machinist will give attention to the repair of all kinds of Mowing Machines, Lawn Machines, and general jobbing. The Steel Plow is leading. The Long-framed Cultivator is superior. The Clipper Mowers, Bay State Rake, the Tedder Horse Hay-fork and Hay-conveyor, are the best helpers in haying.

The Wilson's, Bradley's, Davis's, Upton's, Middleton's, or any other brand of Fertilizer supplied at wholesale or retail.

The Cucumber Wood Pump is unrivaled for cheapness, durability and capacity.

We can now supply the long desired Horizontal Attachment to take well-water indoors for family use, all through wood, and no metallic taste.

Please not delay your repairing until you need the machinery. Please call and consult our catalogues for articles not named; Allen's, of N. Y., on Seeds and Implements; Ames Plow Co., Boston, on Seeds and Implements; Jackson, of N. Y., on Cast-Iron Stable Fixtures, &c. Horse powers ordered and put in working position, &c.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

sighs the weary and exhausted one, as the languor and lassitude of spring comes upon him. Come and receive vigor and strength from the wonderful South American Tonic

JURUBEBA.

Long and successfully used in its native country, as a Powerful Tonic, and Potent Purifier of the Blood, it is found even to exceed the anticipations founded on its great reputation. According to the medical and scientific periodicals of London and Paris, it possesses the Most Powerful Tonic properties known to Materia Medica.

Dr. Well's Extract of Jurubeba is a perfect remedy for all diseases of the BLOOD, ORGANIC WEAKNESS, GLANDULOUS TUMORS, DROPSY, SCROFULA, INTERNAL ABSCESSES, and will remove all obstructions of the LIVER, SPLEEN, INTESTINES, UTERINE and URINARY ORGANS.

It is strengthening and nourishing. Like nutritious food taken into the stomach, it assimilates and diffuses itself through the circulation, giving vigor and health.

It regulates the bowels, quiets the nerves, acts directly on the secretive organs, and, by its powerful Tonic and restoring effects, produces healthy and vigorous action to the whole system.

"PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS."

Parties Decorating their Walls and Ceilings should carefully examine the merits of the WOOD HANGINGS and not accept the unfavorable reports of interested parties. Instead of throwing away your white doors or having them grained or putting in solid hard wood, you can have them covered with Wood Hangings, putting in solid mouldings, saving a great expense.

Office of JAMES Y. SMITH & NICHOLS,
No. 56 Westminster Street,
Providence, R. I., April 20, 1870.
CHARLES W. SPURR, Esq., 43 Summer St., Boston.

DEAR SIR:—Our Union Bank decorated their banking rooms with your Wood Hangings two years ago, which has been much admired. The work stands well, no showing of its giving out in any way. Hope you are successful in introducing the same.

Very truly,
JAMES Y. SMITH, President.

ERIE RAILWAY, JOHN S. DUNLAP, N. England Agent,

CHARLES W. SPURR, Esq.,

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of the 1st, referring to your Wood Hangings. About a year since I had it used in the dining room and halls of my house, and to date I am perfectly satisfied with it in every particular.

Very truly,
JOHN S. DUNLAP.

SELWYN'S THEATRE, MANAGER'S OFFICE,
BOSTON, May 6th, 1870.
CHAS. W. SPURR,

SIR:—I wish to say that your Wood Hangings have been on the walls of the Vestibule of this Theatre since August, 1868, and have proved entirely satisfactory. As the walls were plastered, and the Vestibule very much exposed to the varied changes of the weather, there were serious doubts of the permanency of this style of decoration, but these doubts have been entirely removed. And the truth of this is manifest to the many who come to see and judge for themselves, and who admire its beauty and novelty exceedingly.

I remain yours truly,
JOHN H. SELWYN.

TRANSCRIPT OFFICE, Boston, May 10, 1870.
CHAS. W. SPURR, Esq.,

DEAR SIR:—The Wood Hangings you put upon my house, No. 14 Montgomery Street, has stood the test of two years' use, to the entire satisfaction of the family. It is as firm on the wall as the day you left it. The heat or moisture has not caused the wood to peel in a single spot, and I see no reason why it will not remain so for years. I can cheerfully recommend its use to all, in preference to paper in a dining room.

Respectfully and truly yours,
H. W. DUTTON.

BOSTON, Dec. 24, 1870.

It is with the greatest pleasure we acknowledge the solid and elegant effect produced by your PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS in the halls, dining rooms, and vestibules of the "St. Cloud Hotel." In the construction of this building, we have, as trustees, studied the most rigid economy consistent with durability; and it being within our own knowledge, that, for the past three years your woods had remained wholly unaffected by steam, furnace heat, and dampness, we had no hesitation in using them almost exclusively in the interior decoration. We heartily congratulate you upon the success with which you are meeting.

Very truly, GEORGE B. BIGELOW,
For Trustees of Buffinton Estate.

BOSTON, Nov. 15, 1870.

Since the first introduction of your "PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS," we have had you apply over six thousand (6,000) feet of Dadoe in Black Walnut, White Wood, Butternut and Oak. We have also used your Cedar and White Wood Hangings for Closets, Pantries, and Bath Rooms. Your work has proved to be unaffected by dampness, steam or furnace heat, and while the cost is far below solid wood, you are enabled to give us the choicest varieties. The work you have just finished for us exceeds in elegance of woods and workmanship, all your former efforts. Accept our congratulations in your present success, which must rapidly increase with a general appreciation of the elegance and durability of this mode of decoration.

Yours very truly, &c.,
BOURN & LEAVITT,
